

FOO

Three times to-day my foot-loath horse did stumble,
And started when he look'd upon the Tower,
As loth to bear me to the slaughterhouse. Shaksp. Rich. III.
FOOTED. adj. [from foot.] Shaped in the foot.
Snouted and tailed like a goat, and footed like a goat. Græu.
FOOTFIGHT. n. f. [from foot and fight.] A fight made on foot, in opposition to that on horseback.
So began our footfight in such sort, that we were well entered to blood of both sides. Sidney, b. ii.
FOOTHOLD. n. f. [from foot and hold.] Space to hold the foot;
space on which one may tread surely.
So they all fell to work at the roots of the tree, and left it to little foothold, that the first blast of wind laid it flat upon the ground. L'Estrange.
He's never well 'till he's at the top: he has nothing above him to aspire to, nor any foothold left him to come down by.
L'Estrange, Fable 6.

FOOTING. n. f. [from foot.]

1. Ground for the foot.
I'll read you matter deep and dangerous;
As full of peril and adventurous spirit
As to o'erwalk a current, roaring loud,
On the unfeeling footing of a spear. Shaksp. Henry IV.
As Noah's pigeon, which return'd no more,
Did shew the footing found, for all the flood.
In ascents, every step gained is a footing and help to the next. Holder's Elements of Speech.

2. Foundation; basis; support; root.
Cloven flukes; and, wondrous to behold,
Their sharpest ends in earth their footing place,
And the dry poles produce a living race. Dr. d. Virg. Georg.
All those sublime thoughts take their rise and footing here:
the mind first not one jot beyond those ideas which sense or reflection have offered. Locke.
The reasoning faculties of the soul would not know how to move, for want of a foundation and footing in most men, who cannot trace truth to its fountain and original. Locke.

3. Place.
Whether they unctuous exhalations are,
Fir'd by the sun, or seeming to alone;
Or each some more remote and slippery star,
Which loses footing when to mortals shewn. Dryden.

4. Tread; walk.
I would outnight you did no body come:
But hark, I hear the footing of a man. Shak. Merch. of Ven.
Break off, break off; I feel the different found
Of some chafte footing near about this ground:
Run to your throuds, within these brakes and trees;
Our number may affright. Milton.

5. Dance.
Make holiday: your rye-draw hats put on,
And these fresh nymphs encounter every one In country footing. Shaksp. Henry IV.

6. Steps; road; track.
He grew strong among the Irish; and in his footing his son continuing, hath increased his said name. Spenser on Ireland.
Like running we-ds, that have no certain root; or like footings up and down, impossible to be traced. Bacon's H. VII.

7. Entrance; beginning; establishment.
Ever since our nation had any footing in this land, the state of England did desire to perfect the conquest. Davies.
The defeat of colonel Bellasis gave them their first footing in Yorkshire. Clarendon, b. viii.

No useful arts have yet found footing here;
But all untaught and savage does appear. Dryd. Ind. Emp.

8. State; condition; settlement.
Gaul was on the same footing with Egypt, as to taxes. Arb.

FOOTICKER. n. f. [from foot and lick.] A slave; an humble fawner; one who licks the foot.

Do that good mischief which may make this island
Thine own for ever; and I, thy Caliban,
For ay thy footlicker. Shaksp. Henry IV.

FOOTMAN. n. f. [from foot and man.]

1. A soldier that marches and fights on foot.
The numbers levied by her lieutenant did consist of footmen three millions, of horsemen one million. Raleigh's History.

2. A low mental servant in livery.
He was carried in a rich chariot, litterwise, with two horses at either end, and two footmen on each side. Bacon.

Like footmen running before coaches,
To tell the inn what lord approaches. Prior.

3. One who practices to walk or run.
FOOTMANSHIP. n. f. [from footman.] The art or faculty of a runner.

The Irish archers espying this, suddenly broke up, and committed the safety of their lives to their nimble footmanship. Hayward.

Yet, says the fox, I have baffled more of them with my wiles and shifts than ever you did with your footmanship. L'Estr.

FOOTPACE. n. f. [from foot and pace.]

1. Part of a pair of stairs, whereon, after four or five steps, you arrive to a broad place, where you make two or three paces before you ascend another step, thereby to ease the legs in ascending the rest of the stairs. Mason's Mech. Exerc. 16.

FOP

2. A pace no faster than a slow walk.
FOOTPAD. n. f. [from foot and pad.] A highwayman that robs on foot, not on horseback.

FOOTPATH. n. f. [from foot and path.] A narrow way which will not admit horses or carriages.

Know't thou the way to Dover?
—Both stile and gate, horseway and footpath. Shak. K. Lear.

FOOTPOST. n. f. [from foot and post.] A post or messenger that travels on foot.

For carrying such letters, every thoroughfare weekly ap-pointeth a footpost, whose dispatch is well near as speedy as the horses. Carew's Survey of Cornwall.

FOOTSTALL. n. f. [from foot and stall.] A woman's stirrup.

FOOTSTEP. n. f. [from foot and step.]

1. Trace; track; impression left by the foot.
Clear-lighted reason wisdom's judgment leads,
And sense, her vassal, in her footsteps treads. Denham.

A man shall never want crooked paths to walk in, if he thinks that he is in the right way, where ever he has the footsteps of others to follow. Locke.

2. Token; mark; notice given.
Let us turn our thoughts to the frame of our system, if there we may trace any visible footsteps of Divine Wisdom and Benevolence. Bentley's Sermons.

3. Example.
FOOTSTOOL. n. f. [from foot and stool.] Stool on which he that sits places his feet.

Thus have we swept suspicion from our seat,
And made our footstool of security. Shaksp. Henry VI.

They whose sacred office 'tis to bring Kings to obey their God, and men their kings,
By these mysterious links to fix and tie
Men to the footstool of the Deity. Denham's Sophy.

Let echoing anthems make his praises known
On earth, his footstool, as in heav'n his throne. Roscommon.

By the phrase of worshipping his footstool, no more is meant than worshipping God at his footstool. Stillingfleet.

FOP. n. f. [A word probably made by chance, and therefore without etymology.] A simpering; a coxcomb; a man of small understanding and much ostentation; a pretender; a man fond of show, dress, and flattery; an impertinent.

A whole tribe of fops. Shaksp. King Lear.

Got 'twixen asleep and wake.
When such a positive abandon'd fop,
Among his numerous absurdities,
Stumbles upon some tolerable line,
I fret to see them in such company. Roscommon.

The leopard's beauty, without the fox's wit, is no better than a fop in a gay coat. L'Estrange.

In a dull stream, which moving slow,
You hardly see the current flow;
When a small breeze obstructs the course,
It whirls about for want of force,
And in its narrow circle gathers
Nothing but chaff, and straws, and feathers:
The current of a female mind
Stops thus, and turns with ev'ry wind;
Thus whirling round, together draws Fools, fops, and rakes, for chaff and straws. Swift.

FOPDIDDLE. n. f. [from fop and diddle.] A fool; an insignificant wretch.

Where sturdy butchers broke your noddle,
And handled you like a fopdiddle. Hudibras, p. ii.

FOPPERY. n. f. [from fop.]

1. Folly; impertinence.
Let not the found of shallow foppery enter
My sober house. Shaksp. Merchant of Venice.

I was three or four times in the thought they were not fairies; and yet the guilefulness of my mind, the sudden surprise of my powers, drove the grossness of the foppery into a received belief, in despite of the teeth of all rhyme and reason, that they were fairies. Shaksp. Merry Wives of Windsor.

This is the excellent foppery of the world, that when we are sick in fortune, often the surfeits of our own behaviour, we make guilty of our disasters the fun, the moon and stars, as if we were villains on necessity. Shaksp. King Lear.

2. Affectation of show or importance; showy folly.
Foolery; vain or idle practice; idle affectation.

They thought the people were better let alone in their fopperies, than to be suffered to break loose from that subjection which their superstition kept them in. Stillingfleet.

But though we fetch from Italy and France
Our fopperies of tune, and mode of dance,
Our sturdy Britons scorn to borrow sense. Granville.

I wish I could say quaint fopperies were wholly absent from graver subjects. Swift to the Lord High Treasurer.

FOPPISH. adj. [from fop.]

1. Foolish; idle; vain. Fools

FOR

Fools ne'er had less grace in a year;
For wife men are grown foppish,
And know not how their wits to wear,
Their manners are so apish. Shaksp. King Lear.

2. Vain in show; foolishly ostentatious; vain of dress.
With him the present still some virtues have;
The vain are brightly, and the stupid grave;
The slothful negligent, the foppish neat;
The lewd are airy, and the dry discreet. Garth's Dispensat.

The Romans grew extremely expensive and foppish in this article; so that the emperor Aurelian forbid men that variety of colours on their shoes, allowing it still to women. Arbuth.

FOPPISHLY. adv. [from foppish.] Vainly; ostentatiously.

FOPPINENESS. n. f. [from foppish.] Vanity; showy or ostentatious vanity.

FOPPLING. n. f. [from fop.] A petty fop; an under-rate coxcomb.

Thy works in Chloe's toilet gain a part,
And, with his tailor, share the foppish heart. Tickell.

FOR. prep. [from for, Saxon; vor, Dutch.]

1. Because of.
That which we for our unworthiness are afraid to crave, our prayer is, that God for the worthiness of his son would not withstanding vouchsafe to grant. Hooker, b. v. f. 47.

Edward and Richard,
With fiery eyes sparkling for very wrath,
Are at our backs. Shaksp. Henry VI. p. iii.

Speak, good Cominius;
Leave nothing out for length.
For as much as the question cannot be scanned, unless the time of Abraham's journey be considered of, I will search into a tradition concerning his travels. Raleigh's Hist. of the World.

An astrologer faith, if it were not for two things that are constant, no individual would last one moment. Bacon.

For as much as it is a fundamental law in the Turkish empire, that they may, without any other provocation, make war upon Christendom for the propagation of their laws; and so the Christians may at all times, as they think good, be upon the prevention. Bacon's War with Spain.

The governor, falling out, took great store of victual and warlike provision, which the Turks had for haste left behind them. Kneller's History of the Turks.

Their offer he willingly accepted, knowing that he was not able to keep that space three days, for lack of victual. Kneller.

Quit, quit, for shame; this will not move,
This cannot take her:
If of herself she will not love,
Nothing can make her.

Care not for frowns or smiles. Denham's Sophy, Prod.
The hypocrite or carnal man hopes, and is the wickedest for hoping. Hammond's Pract. Catech.

Let no man, for his own poverty, become more oppressing in his bargains; but quietly recommend his estate to God;
and leave the success to him.

Persons who have lost most of their grinders, having been compelled to use three or four only in chewing, wore them so low that the inward nerve lay bare, and they would no longer for pain make use of them. Ray on the Creation.

I but revenge my fate; disdain'd, betray'd,
And suffering death for this ungrateful maid. Dryden.

Sole on the barren sands, the suff'ring chief Roar'd out for anguish, and indulg'd his grief. Dryden.

For his long absence church and state did groan,
Madness the pulpit, faction seiz'd the throne. Dryden.

Nor with a superstitious fear is aw'd
For what befalls at home, or what abroad. Dryd. Virg. Gen.

I, my own judge, condemn'd myself before;
For pity, aggravate my crime no more. Dryden's Aurengz.

Matrons of renown,
When tyrant Nero burnt th' imperial town,
Shrick'd for the downfall in a doleful cry,
For which their guiltless lords were doom'd to die. Dryden.

Children, discountenanced by their parents for any fault, find a refuge in the caresses of foolish flatterers. Locke.

A sound mind in a sound body is a short but full description of a happy state in this world: he that has these two has little more to wish for, and he that wants either of them will be but little the better for any thing else. Locke.

The middle of the gulph is remarkable for tempests. Addis.

My open'd thought to joyous prospect rais'd,
And for thy mercy let me sing thy praise. Prior.

Which best or worst, you could not think;
And die you must, for want of drink. Prior.

It is a most infamous scandal upon the nation, to reproach them for treating foreigners with contempt. Swift.

We can only give them that liberty now for something, which they have so many years exercised for nothing, of railing and scribbling against us. Swift.

Your sermons would be less valuable, for want of time. Swift.

2. With respect to; with regard to.

FOR

Rather our state's defective for requital,
Than we to stretch it out. Shaksp. Coriolanus.

A paltry ring
That she did give me, whose poetry was,
For all the world, like cutlers poetry
Upon a knife; love me and leave me not. Shaksp. Lear.

For all the world,
As thou art at this hour, was Richard then. Shaksp. H. IV.

It was young counsel for the persons, and violent counsel for the matters. Bacon, Essay 21.

Authority followeth old men, and favour and popularity youth; but for the moral part, perhaps, youth will have the pre-eminence, as age hath for the politick. Bacon's Essays.

Comets are rather gazed upon than wisely observed in their effects; that is, what kind of comet for magnitude or colour, produceth what kind of effects. Bacon, Essay 54.

For me, if there be such a thing as I.
He faith these honours consisted in preserving their memories, and praising their virtues; but for any matter of worship towards them, he utterly denies it. Stillingfleet.

Our laws were for their matter foreign.
Now for the government, it is absolute monarchy; there being no other laws in China but the king's command. Temple.

For me, no other happiness I own,
Than to have born no issue to the throne. Dryd. Tyr. Love.

For me, my stormy voyage at an end,
I to the port of death securely tend. Dryden's Æn. b. xii.

After death, we spirits have just such natures
We had, for all the world, when human creatures. Dryden.

Such little waifs, and yet so full of spite;
For bulk mere insects, yet in mischief strong. Tate's Juv.

Hobbes has given us a correct explanation of the sense in general; but for particulars and circumstances, he continually lops them. Pope's Preface to the Iliad.

Lo, some are yellom, and the rest as good,
For all his lordship knows, but they are wood. Pope.

3. In this sense it has often as before it.
As for Maramaldus the general, they had no just cause to militate him, being an old captain of great experience. Kneller.

4. In the character of.
If a man can be fully assured of any thing for a truth, without having examined what is there that he may not embrace for truth? Locke.

She thinks you favour'd:
But let her go, for an ungrateful woman. A. Phillips.

Say, is it fitting in this very field,
This field, where from my youth I've been a carter,
I, in this field, should die for a deserter? Gay.

5. With resemblance of.
I hear for certain, and do speak the truth,
The gentle York is up. Shaksp. Henry IV. p. ii.

Now, now for sure, deliverance is at hand,
The kingdom shall to Israel be restor'd. Paradise Regain'd.

The startling feed was seiz'd with sudden fright,
And bounding, o'er the postmill cast the knight:
Forward he flew, and pitching on his head,
He quiver'd with his feet, and lay for dead. Dryden.

6. Considered as; in the place of.
Our present lot appears
For happy, though but ill; for ill, not worst,
If we procure not to ourselves more woe. Milton's P. Lost.

The council-table and star-chamber held for honourable that which pleased, and for just that which profited. Clarendon.

Read all the prefaces of Dryden,
For those out critics much confide in;
Though merely writ at first for fillings,
To raise the volume's price a shilling. Swift.

7. In advantage of; for the sake of.
An ant is a vile creature for itself; but it is a shrewd thing in an orchard. Bacon, Essay 24.

He refused not to die for those that killed him, and shed his blood for some of those that spilt it. Boyle.

Whether some hero's fate,
In words worth dying for, he celebrate. Cowley.

Shall I think the world was made for one,
And men are born for kings, as beasts for men,
Not for protection, but to be devour'd? Dryd. Span. Fryar.

8. Conducive to; beneficial to.
It is for the general good of human society, and consequently of particular persons, to be true and just; and it is for mens health to be temperate. Stillingfleet, Sermon 1.

It can never be for the interest of a believer to do me a mischief, because he is sure, upon the balance of accounts, to find himself a loser by it. Addis. Spectator, N. 186.

9. With intention of going to a certain place.
We sailed from Peru, where we had continued for the space of one whole year, for China and Japan, taking with us victuals for twelve months. Bacon's New Atlantis.

As she was brought for England, she was cast away near Harwich haven. Hayward.

We sailed directly for Genoa, and had a fair wind. Addis.
